it is like giving perfume to the violet to write words of commendation about Lillian Lewis. The character of La Tioba in "Good Bye, Sweetheart," furnishes her the fitting opportunity for her special gifts of voice and manner and play of features, which have brought her a permanent reputation as an artist of the first rank. There is a delicate stroke of nature in all her movements and a keen suggestion of subdued and irreststible womanliness, even when she is slient,

HAD CHANGED HANDS.

The New Steamers for the Old Dominion Line.

The steamer Seneca, which was run back into Savannah harbor on fire, after having gone seventy miles on her way to New York, and sunk on her return in order to prevent total destruction, was not the property of the Old Dominion Steamship Company, although she belonged to that line a short time ago.

Inquiry at the office of their agency in this city elicited the information that she was sold back to her builders, Messrs. John Roach & Sons, and by them trans-ferred to the Ward Line some time ago. Messrs. Roach & Sons are now building wo fast steamers for the Old Dominion for service between Norfolk and New York, which will reduce the time between those points from 23 to 18 hours or lers. They will be named the Jamestown and Yorkiown, and will be larger than any of the steamers now in the service of that line. Two steamers of these names ran from New York to Richmond before the war, and were converted into Cenfederate gunboats. The father of Capt. Couch, of the steamer "Old Dominion," was commander of one of them. These two steamers will be ready, for service by May 1st.

An Orchestra of Young Girls Rendered

Some Entertaining selections.

No more people could have been comfortably accommodated at the concert given by the young ladies of St. Mary's Benedictine Society last evening at St.

An overture to Santa Claus, composed An overture to Santa Claus, composed by Olney, was very well rendered by the girl orchestra, consisting of Misses Conway, Zimmermann, Quinn, Sitterding, Gude, Bahen, Dippner, Morris, Florsheim, Johnston, Nuckols, Loving, and Newheiser, after which a musical drama, entitled "Ruth, the Gleaner," arranged by the sisters of St. Mary's school, was given. Over fifty young neonle took part given. Over fifty young people took part in the play. The dialogue was all sung. and while all of their voices were no quite up to the mark, they showed careful instruction in their characters. When the play was concluded, a violin solo was deilcately played by Miss Mary Brooks, accompanied by the orchestra.

The concert was followed with a doll drill, in which the children participating were dressed as little nurses. They were white aprops and caps. As they were mere tots, they looked very funny and cute in their costumes. The orchestra then rendered "A Jolly Sleigh-Ride Party," a descriptive piece of music by Barnard, after which everybody went home, expressing themselves as ve-much pleased with the entertainment. #### HELEN KELLER AT THE FAIR. Her Exquisite Satisfaction Over the Revela lons Others Made to Her.

Helen Keller, the blind girl, who has come to a wonderful knowledge of the world, though deprived of her full complement of senses, came to the World's Fair and saw, through her own fingers, but through others' eyes. A writer in the De ember St. Nichons thus tells of the visit Helen Keller spent three weeks in Chicase during the Exposition, "and had t erfectly splendid time." Thousands and housands of American young folks wil share her enthusiasm as they recall the delightful days at the wonderful show, when, seeing it all and hearing all about it, they took in pleasure and information at every turn. But little Helen Keller can neither see nor hear. Everything is a blank to her until an impression can be made either through her imagination of through the deaf and dumb language fingers; and even then, in Keller's case, the words are not seen, but felt by her own palm and fingers as they lightly hold the hand that is making these signs of words and letters.

The president and the managers of the ition were exceedingly kind to her and did all in their power to make her visit pleasant and instructive. So widely s she known and so general is the interest n her, that wherever she went she received loving attention. The task of dethe helpful sympathy of the chiefs of the departments. They gladly permitted her to pass her finger over the exhibits whenver it was possible, and cheerfully gave y means of the manual alphabet. She was allowed even to climb upon the great Krupp gun, and its workings were explained to us by one of the German offl cers. Everywhere the show-cases were opened for her, and rare works of art were given to her for examination.

At the Cape of Good Pope exhibit the great doors were unlocked, and Helen was admitted to the realm of diamonds, where everything was carefully explained where everything was carefully explained to us about the precious stone; how it is mined, separated from the matrix, weighed, cut, and set. Wherever it was possible, she touched the machinery, and followed the work being done. Then she was made very happy by being allowed to find a diamond herself—the only true diamond, they assured her, that had every hear the statement. mond, they assured her, that had ever been found in the United States.

But the French bronzes afforded her more pleasure than anything else at the Fair. The picture which she presented as she bent over a beautiful group, her eager fingers studying the faces or fol-lowing the graceful lines of the figures in her effort to catch the author's thought. was the most touching and pathetic I have ever seen. And, strange as it may seem to those who depend upon their eyes for the pleasure which they derive from works of art, this little blind girl, who has not seen the light since she was nineteen months old, rarely failed to divine the thoughts which the artists had wrought into their work.

Constant practice, indeed, has given to Helen's sense of touch a delicacy and precision seldom attained even by the blind. Sometimes it seems as if her very soul were in her fingers, she finds so much to interest her everywhere. People frequently said to me at the Fair: sees more with her fingers than we do with our eyes." And in one of her letters she says: "I am like the people my dear friend Dr. Holmes tells about, 'with eyes in their fingers that spy out everything interesting, and take hold of it as the magnet picks out iron flings."

Descriptions are to Helen what paintings are to us; and her well-trained imagination gives the light and color. One evening, as we set in a gondola, I tried to tell Helen how the thousands of tiny electric lights were reflected in the waters of the lagoons, when she asked: "Does it look as if a shower of golden fish had been caught in an invisible net?" Is it any wonder that Dr. Folmes says of her: "She is a poet whose lyre was taken from any wonder that Dr. free was taken from her n her early days, but whose soul is full of music."

So we see, pathetic as Helen's life must those who enloy the bless. always seem to those who enjoy the bless-ings of sight and hearing, that it is yet full of brightness and cheer, of courage

During the shooting of the logs one particular log went over recently and shot straight downward and was soon shot straight downward and was soon lost in the pool below. After it had risen to the surface and floated down stream it was seen to have a rock embedded in one end, which upon examination, in one end, which upon examination, was found to be quartz rich in gold. The only explanation is that the log the pool upder the pool under in the mad plunge into the pool under the falls came in contact with some ledge of gold with force enough to emhed the piece found in the firm wood,-Seattle Telegrapa.
